

A MAJOR EXPENSE for Crown Zellerbach in recent years has been pollution abatement, both air and water. Because of the corporation's commitment to a healthy environment, Camas is now much "cleaner" than it was in the old days. In 1975 the corporation dedicated the completion of a $16 million air recovery furnace, which virtually eliminated "those little specks" Camas residents used to find on their vehicles and everything else every day. In 1971 a $14 million magnefite furnace (at right) was installed to assist in improving water quality.